

NICOLE JOSEPH

If you had a magic wand, would you zap yourself a fairy godmother? I know a lot of people who would, including me. But I am thankful for everything that makes my life worth living. Every morning, I wake up in a room that's NOT filled with gold, and I still joyfully eat my breakfast in my lovely home. It's important to love your life every day, not just on Thanksgiving. I am very grateful for the wise people in the world that don't take everything for granted.

Starting off, I'm going to say something that everyone would say. I have the best friends and family in the world. I feel so spoiled because I live in a great home filled with food and clothing, I go to school, and have considerate friends that put a smile on my face. So many people out there, even children, are starving, dressed in rags, and lacking education. This devastating situation got worse during Hurricane Sandy. Luckily, our country is caring and gives everyone freedom and respect.

I am thankful for everything in the world; although it is not perfect, at least I'm alive I love everyone even strangers and I hope for world peace one day. I am grateful for the good, as well as the bad people. I am mainly thankful for hope. This is what helps people pull through when they make mistakes and get in unfortunate situations. That is why I am most thankful for one very important thing,
